Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 31 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Variable amounts of cloud, outbreaks of rain, unseasonably mild.

Today:
New Year's Eve will start rather dull and grey however skies should break readily during the morning with some decent sunny spells developing. Feeling very mild with winds easing. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Variable amounts of cloud with clear spells here and there particularly across eastern areas, remaining cloudier in the west, staying mild. Minimum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Saturday:
A band of cloud and rain quickly arrives pushing eastwards during the day sunny spells following. Rather windy and mild. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Remaining windy with further showers on Sunday and Bank Holiday Monday. A band of rain likely to edge south on Tuesday introducing colder conditions later in the day.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.